METZGER MAP IS CHALLENGED

Doubts as to the authenticity of the map prepared by D. E. Metzger of Hilo, showing his ideas of how the land for Greater Hilo should be laid out and where the new Hilo wharf should be situated, arose at the meeting of the Harbor Commission yesterday afternoon when Chairman Marston Campbell produced a certified copy of the Army engineer's map without the borings shown on the Metzger map.

Where Metzger shows lava the engineer's map shows coral and sand and in almost every instance where Metzger claims hard rock the other map shows soft material. The statement was made that Metzger had either been imposed upon or that, being anxious to get certain data, it had been supplied to him by a former employee of the engineers named Payke. Following the introduction of the new map the chairman was authorized to send two or three men to Hilo to make additional borings near the land end of the wharf where a cap of lava overlies the coral and sand. In the meantime the work of preparing the plans and specifications for the dredging and wharf will be pushed ahead and may be submitted to the Board at its next meeting.

Colonel McCarthy made a kick against the quality of the blocks that the Pahoa company is supplying for the Hilo wharf and stated that the material had not come up to specifications. A statement of facts submitted showed that 24-inch ohia would equal 24-inch to 3-inch northwest. Tenders for both classes of wood are to be called for the Queen street wharf.

A map showing the proposed new oil pipe line that is to be laid by the Hawaiian Electric Company and the Inter-Island Company was submitted. It shows a distance of 8700 feet. Campbell stated that he was doubtful as to the propriety of the Government securing the right-of-way and the matter was finally referred to the Attorney General.

It was reported to the Board that the piling on the Oceanic wharf was bad. Campbell asked for the renewal of the two hundred piles, but Wakefield, in view of the bulkhead plan, which would involve some changes in the wharf, suggested that the matter be held in abeyance for some time, as the report does not state that the dock is in a dangerous state.

A report showed that repairs to the Waimea wharf had been completed and the work on the Nawiliwili wharf is now to be done. This includes the widening of the approach, laying car rails flush with the wharf itself and making other improvements.

The Board also authorized the expenditure of $1870 on the Napoosopo wharf. The shed is to be extended and a flare built to prevent the spray from coming on the wharf.

VANIMAN NOW HAS RIVAL

Attempt to Be Made Soon By Germany Dirigible Suchard, Built for the Purpose.

BERLIN, Germany, March 25. — Everything is practically in readiness at the Johannistal aviation grounds, near this city for the trial flights of the dirigible airship Suchard, which is soon to undertake the hazardous task of making a flight across the Atlantic ocean, from Tenerife to the West Indies. Dr. Paul F. Gans, the scientific head of the undertaking, who is to be in command during the trans-Atlantic flight, Joseph Brucker, the business manager of the enterprise and the members of the prospect crew are on the spot, ready for the first trial flight, which is awaited with great interest by the public in general and the dirigible enthusiasts in particular.

The dirigible balloon Suchard, which has been built especially for this trans-oceanic flight, was completed last Fall, but after its completion it was found advisable to make some alterations and rearrangements, which made it impossible to carry out the original plan of making the flight before the beginning of winter. If the trial flights during the next few days should be successful, the balloon and its attachment will be packed without delay and shipped to the Canary Islands. The start is to be made from Tenerife at the earliest opportunity.

The Suchard is a non-rigid dirigible of the Parseval type, 250 feet long and 54 feet in greatest diameter. It is equipped with three powerful engines of the type used in the Parseval. Each is capable of developing 110 horsepower and weighs about 800 pounds. They can be operated independently and are to be used only as auxiliaries, to keep the airship in its course. The balloon will depend for its propulsion almost entirely upon the trade winds, which at this time of the year, blow steadily from the Canary Islands toward the West Indian archipelago.

Dr. Gans and his friends are confident that the flight can be made safely at this time of the year and that it will take about four or five days after the start from Tenerife to reach some of the West Indian Islands. The danger of gas leakage, which would make it impossible for the big balloon to remain in the air so long, has been materially diminished, in the opinion of Dr. Gans, by the coating of the balloon, which will absorb moisture from the atmosphere, thus protecting the enclosed gas from the heat of the sun and consequent excessive expansion. The balloon will be ballasted with sea water of which a sufficient supply will be carried to sprinkle the balloon during the hottest time of the day. Under the bag is a gallery for sleeping quarters and below that will be suspended a powerboat that can be quickly cut loose in case of accident. The powerboat is intended as the main living quarters of the six men of the crew.

The motors drive two two-bladed propellers of the Parseval type which make only 400 revolutions a minute. It is planned to run the motors alternately during the day and depend altogether upon the trade wind at night. According to the present plan the voyage is to be made at a height of 500 to 600 feet. The dirigible will be steered by an ordinary vertical rudder and for the purpose of rising, descending and balancing large fans, like aeroplanes, will be used. The steering is to be done by compass and to enable the navigator of the craft to judge of the leeway, bright red hollow aluminum balls will be dropped from time to time. The expedition will carry a liberal supply of these balls. Owing to the fact that the engines will run alternately and only during part of the day, the quantity of benzine used will be trifling, which is rather important, as it would be impossible to carry a large supply of that fuel.

Of course, owing to the difficulty of holding a definite course in a balloon or airship steered by compass only, Dr. Gans is unable to tell where his craft is going to land. The general course will be in the direction of the Caribbean Islands and Dr. Gans intends to make a landing on the first island or part of the mainland which the balloon should reach. The airship is equipped with a wireless apparatus and can signal at a distance of 150 miles.

INVENTOR TUCH PERFECTS PEST EXTERMINATOR

A patent has just been granted to C. C. Tuch for a rat and insect-killer. It does not only catch them but it kills them every time. Mr. Tuch has had a working model of his exterminator "set" and going for some time, bagging fruit flies, cockroaches, centipedes, mosquitoes and mice. So far the rats have shown sense enough to keep away.

The exterminator consists of a box with a double covering of wire mesh, with a nice round hole in the side and a doorstop covered with wire. Attached is an electric light connection, ready to screw into any bulb socket. One wire goes to one part of the exterminator and the other to another, and all that is necessary is for something to join up the circuit and "get 'em." The current necessary to kill comes from the electric light wire, terminated by a resistance coil. An ordinary rat will stop carrying fleas after getting a 120-volt jolt, other pests in proportion.

"One beauty of my exterminator is that it only uses current when it is working," explains the inventor.
